

Biography

Warren Rosewarne is the Chief Financial Officer of Raytheon Australia.

In this role, he is responsible for statutory and regulatory matters concerning the company, as well as providing financial guidance and advice to the board of directors and executive leadership team. Warren is a key member of the management team, working closely with integrated business team managers and business development teams in the development of strategic plans and in monitoring performance.

Warren has an extensive career of more than 20 years in Australian industry in various finance leadership roles. His finance cadetship was spent with Australian Consolidated Industries where he was promoted into a number of BU Controller positions. He has held a number of positions as Chief Financial Officer in engineering, construction and service industries. Prior to joining Raytheon, Warren was employed by Boeing Australia in the Naval division with responsibilities, which included the overseeing of the Collins Submarine Combat System Program.

Warren is a rounded professional with a broad range of skills and expertise. He has a thorough understanding of defence industry project performance measurement, and is committed to continuous improvement and the achievement of corporate goals and objectives.

Warren is a graduate of the University of Technology, Sydney with a Bachelor of Business (Accounting) degree. He is a fellow of the Australian Society of Certified Practising Accountants (FCPA). He is also a graduate of the Australian Defence Industry Study Course.